For my Master thesis on the meaning of decolonizing for libraries, a content analysis of 15 SOURCES led to the development of 5 CATEGORIES, defined and application examples added. The majority of the categories, 3, explicitly mentioned the self-decolonization, the most common term used in the analyzed literature. The other two categories, 4 and 5, were not used in the 15 sources. The self-decolonization, the process of unlearning the dominant narratives and assumptions, includes the following aspects:

1. CRITICAL THINKING
   - WE MUST QUESTION THE STEREOTYPICAL "LIBERATION LENS" AND RELEARNING EXAMINES ALL PROACTIVELY WHAT WE DO

2. DIVERSITY AND THE POST-COLONIAL
   - "self-decolonization" the most common term used in the analyzed literature.

3. LIBRARY PRACTICE
   - ARLIS 50th Anniversary Conference Initiatives; contribution to the ARLIS 50th Anniversary Conference.

4. THE PROCESS OF DECOLONIZING
   - Libraries are now at an early stage of knowing means doing and defining publishing in the context.

5. THE OTHER
   - Institutions and projects are aimed at becoming safe and inclusive spaces, removing barriers and imperial projects that had been established while reproducing knowledge and knowledges in society.

(1) We are not separate from the field and begin the process to self-decolonize in the intersection of knowing means doing and defining publishing in the context. Despite their progress toward diversity and the post-colonial, white librarians should have long served to assist Indigenous communities and underprivileged environments.

(2) Libraries are now at the early stage of knowing means doing and defining publishing in the context. Decolonization, in this process, is an analysis of our own privileges and responsibilities.

(3) Libraries are now at the early stage of knowing means doing and defining publishing in the context. The project is partially financed by public funds. Following these recommendations, the project is a key player in bringing about change but has many challenges.

(4) Libraries are now at the early stage of knowing means doing and defining publishing in the context. The project is partially financed by public funds.

(5) Libraries are now at the early stage of knowing means doing and defining publishing in the context. Despite their progress toward diversity and the post-colonial, white librarians should have long served to assist Indigenous communities and underprivileged environments.

(6) Libraries are now at the early stage of knowing means doing and defining publishing in the context. Despite their progress toward diversity and the post-colonial, white librarians should have long served to assist Indigenous communities and underprivileged environments.

(7) Libraries are now at the early stage of knowing means doing and defining publishing in the context. Despite their progress toward diversity and the post-colonial, white librarians should have long served to assist Indigenous communities and underprivileged environments.

(8) Libraries are now at the early stage of knowing means doing and defining publishing in the context. Despite their progress toward diversity and the post-colonial, white librarians should have long served to assist Indigenous communities and underprivileged environments.

(9) Libraries are now at the early stage of knowing means doing and defining publishing in the context. Despite their progress toward diversity and the post-colonial, white librarians should have long served to assist Indigenous communities and underprivileged environments.